1. Overview

- 1.1. Every 22 minutes a parent of a child dies that's around 23,600 bereaved children each year. Almost one in every class. Many more are bereaved of a grandparent, sibling, friend, teacher or other significant person in their life'. (Child Bereavement UK, 2017 statistics)
- 1.2. It is almost inevitable therefore, that at some time any school will have to deal with a death that impacts the whole school community. Death is something that we do not like to think about, so when we are faced with it, we often find ourselves underprepared.
- 1.3. Bereavement and loss are an inevitable part of living and growing. It is important that within your whole school setting you provide learning opportunities for children to develop their own appropriate range of emotional, spiritual and intellectual responses to manage these experiences. The ethos of your school which is often based upon openness and mutual support, provides a framework in which these experiences can be realised in a supportive manner. Bereavement impacts everyone in different ways and for different periods of time. Whatever the level of understanding about bereavement, you have a duty to help support anyone when they could be feeling their most vulnerable, in the way that best meets their needs. By adopting a planned, open and considered approach the school can support the emotional well-being of the child, family and staff.
- 1.4. The purpose of creating a bereavement policy is to help everyone within the school community realise bereavement is a normal, natural part of life which needs to be discussed openly. It should outline ways; to respond in caring for the wellbeing of children and staff at a time when they may be in shock, upset and confused, to ensure effective communication takes place, support available for each member of the school community to ensure there is as little disruption as possible to the daily school routine.

2. Guidelines for staff and governors

- 2.1. A death can affect the school community in different ways and often depends on:
 - 2.2. The role the deceased person had within school
 - 2.3. How well known they were in the local community
 - 2.4. Circumstances surrounding the death, particularly suicide or violent deaths
 - 2.5. Rumour and gossip can be very damaging and can even lead to both young and old developing the attitude that the death is not a topic to talk about. Children and young people have a healthy curiosity, and if they are not informed of the circumstances or feel they are unable to ask questions, their normal grief process can be obstructed. Where possible, discussion should take place with the bereaved family and their wishes taken into account before any decisions are made in relation to how and what to tell the staff and wider school community.
- 2.6. It is important to consider any cultural or religious implications and seek advice if necessary.

- 2.7. ALL staff (including support staff such as lunch time supervisors, PE coaches...) will be informed as soon as possible using your normal method of communication, e.g. a whole school staff meeting or team meeting, ensure this includes part time staff and measures are taken to inform absent staff over the telephone.
- 2.8. Give a factual explanation of how the death occurred and if applicable the circumstances of what happened leading up to the death.
- 2.9. Ensure Senior Leadership team are prepared for reactions to this news including visible upset and feelings of anger/guilt. People may connect the incident to their own personal experience of bereavement, so feelings about past bereavements may need to be discussed. This is perfectly natural.
- 2.10. Ensure a member of Senior Leadership is available to members of staff, parents or children if they are finding the situation particularly hard. Seek the advice of external support services as appropriate (see Appendix 4).
- 2.11. Be prepared to arrange supply cover if necessary.
- 2.12. Establish one person as a point of contact for the family to ensure free flow of accurate information to and from the school.
- 2.13. Bereavement support or counselling should be available to all as necessary (requesting external bereavement support if needed – Simon Says, Winston’s Wish, Cruse, Compassionate Friends and the Educational Psychology Service, if psychological de-briefing is thought necessary).
- 2.14. Arrange staff/pupil condolences with collaborative agreement if felt appropriate.
- 2.15. Agree a set time for teachers to inform their class what has happened, how this is to be done and EXACTLY what is going to be said. Identify any absent pupils.
- 2.16. Be prepared to follow this up with a special assembly, memorial service or memorial tree/garden...
- 2.17. Arrange for the Wellbeing Team or Senior Leadership Team to be on hand at the end of the working day for staff to de-brief and reflect upon the day’s events and to agree upon any further action or support that may need to be put in place. Staff who will be alone that night could be identified and arrangements made for colleagues to contact them by phone if necessary.
- 2.18. Speed and chaos may be a major factor on a day when a critical incident has happened – the speed and chaos meaning that constant referring to plans and lists is not possible. DON’T WORRY! Be confident enough to go with your gut instinct. Remember that keeping people as informed as possible is always helpful.
- 2.19. Where possible staff who have requested to attend the funeral or memorial should be released.

3. Guidelines for informing students

- 3.1. People often think that children do not grieve, but even very young children will want to know what happened, how it happened, why it happened and perhaps most importantly of all, what happens next? The following guidelines will help you to inform children of the death:
- 3.2. Identify children who are most likely to be impacted by the news because they had a close relationship with the deceased or are already bereaved to be told together as a separate group. Where possible inform pupils in the smallest group, preferably class or tutor groups. This should be done by adults they know.
- 3.3. It is always a shock when a death occurs in a school even if it may have been anticipated. Children expect to live forever, and so a fellow student dying can feel quite shocking. Experience has shown that it is more beneficial if all pupils are informed.
- 3.4. Provide staff with guidelines on how to inform children; be honest, it is ok to say if you don't have the answers but remember to revisit the question at a later date when you do have the answer (See Appendix 1).
- 3.5. Be prepared for children to say or do the unexpected, experience has shown some responses or apparent lack of response may be upsetting for adults. No apparent response does not mean that a child does not care.
- 3.6. Try to identify any key answers that you may need to prepare, e.g. the facts about an illness, or dates which may be relevant to the death such as end of school year and changing class or schools.
- 3.7. End up discussion on a positive note - not all people who are ill or have accidents die - many get better. Consider a prayer to remember the deceased and their family. Perhaps co-ordinate an assembly to end discussion.
- 3.8. Do pupils want to do an activity to express their thoughts and feelings? Do they want to arrange for representatives to attend the funeral? How will this be managed?
- 3.9. Grief will last a life time and can surface throughout with new questions and many reflections

4. In the days after the death

- 4.1. It is important to consider any cultural or religious implications and seek advice if necessary.
- 4.2. Ensure nominated staff with responsibilities for supporting staff and children, are available to do so.
- 4.3. It may be necessary temporarily to provide staff cover for their normal activities.
- 4.4. Identify an allocated quiet place where children, young people and staff can go if necessary. This will be the purple room.
- 4.5. It is preferable for there to be minimum disruption to the timetable but some flexibility may be required.
- 4.6. Try to engender an awareness of when people need help and support, particularly those who worked closely with the person who has died and secretaries /administrative staff who are taking telephone calls, dealing with parents etc.
- 4.7. Through the nominated staff member who has responsibilities for liaising with the individual's family, ascertain their wishes about the school's involvement in the funeral, if any.
- 4.8. In line with the families' wishes consider practical issues such as:
- 4.9. Sending flowers to the home or to the funeral, making a collection etc...
 - Who will attend the funeral?
 - Cover for any staff who may be going to the funeral.
 - Informing the parents of those pupils who will be involved.
 - Possible closure of the school. If this is the case remember to tell lunchtime supervisors, caretaker etc. in advance.

5. Bereavement Flowchart

5.1. This flowchart will support you to build your school plan to respond to a bereavement:

You are informed of a bereavement

Identify the relevant communication pathway (see Appendix 2) and as a team the tasks required and who is best to complete them.

Senior member of the team to contact family – phone call/send card/letter of condolence.

Appointed person from the setting to discuss with the family and child or young person who they want their story shared with and support available to them.

Inform others – staff, families, children and young people of the setting as agreed with the bereaved family, child and young person.

Appointed person to be point of contact for family – discuss funeral arrangements/return to school.

Appointed person arrange to see child or young person at home or in the setting to assess their needs and level of support required at this time.

Appointed person liaise with child or young person and support their return to the setting.

Appointed person ensure significant dates and events for the child or young person are recorded and shared with all staff for future reference (birthdays, anniversaries).

Appointed person continues to assess the needs of the child or young person. Observation, discussion with significant people, including the child or young person regarding their concerns or worries, and outside agencies if required.

Ensure friendships are secure as peer support can be very important

Continue regular contact with the family – show you still care about them and their child or young person.
Sign post to outside agencies if deemed appropriate.

6. Guidelines for supporting a bereaved student return to school

- 6.1. When the child or young person returns to the setting they may want to get straight back into friends, work and routine. They will have been surrounded by grieving family members and often a chaotic household of visitors. School maybe their break from that.
- 6.2. Have some action plans in place to help the child and young people return by:
- 6.3. Identifying a member of the team who will be the main contact point for them and their family.
- 6.4. Ensure regular contact, this may be daily or weekly depending on needs and wishes of the family. This helps you understand how they are coping, what support they may need now and in the future, to discuss concerns and worries and plan strategies to cope.
- 6.5. If they stay at home, remember them. Have cards and messages sent to them from appropriate people (peer group and staff they have good relationships with) Activities such as these will give the other children the opportunity to discuss their own concerns or experiences with the family and help them to feel they are doing something positive to support them, you may want to collate them into a book. This death may remind others of their own experiences and so be prepared to support them. You may find out information about a child in your class that you didn't know before. Be ready to listen to them all.
- 6.6. Before they return ensure all staff are aware of the bereavement and the possible effects on them, their behaviour and their learning, so that appropriate care and support can be given throughout the setting. Remember bereaved children and young people have 'physical' illness, such as headaches, tummy aches and feeling sick, as well as mental sadness including lack of concentration, feeling tired, disorganised anger and frustration. These will have an impact on work load and learning. Monitor how things are going on their return and maintain communication with all staff involved.
- 6.7. Maintain normal rules and expectations of behaviour. This is important for the children and young people within the setting and the child or young person who have been bereaved. The rules and expectations are all part of the 'normal' routine and will help to make them feel secure. Remember the impact of bereavement on the whole family when giving sanctions and the impact the sanctions may have on the whole family
- 6.8. Consider 'time out' strategies that suit the child or young person and the setting. Time out cards, signals or signs can help them to exit the room quickly if they are feeling vulnerable or emotional. Make sure they have a safe place to exit to.
- 6.9. Remember, there is no set pattern or time limit to grief – It is a unique experience and the process is a lifelong one. At different ages and during new or transitional times they will have new questions requiring answers and questions requiring a re-visit of what happened; to develop a better understanding and acceptance.

- 6.10. It is not unusual for bereaved pupils to take time off school during the early stages of their bereavement. For some, the need to be with their families will be strong, and indeed they may suffer from separation anxiety when the time comes for a return to school. For others the familiarity, stability and routines of school life may prompt an early return.
- 6.11. The time away from school will vary from pupil to pupil but when they do return, they may have a number of concerns – you will only know what these are and how they might be resolved if you ask. Some of the more common concerns might be:
- 6.12. How will staff and peers react– who has been told, what do they know, what will be said, how much will I have to say to people?
You can help by - meeting with them to welcome them back, acknowledge the death and talk through their concerns. Saying something simple like “I am sorry to hear that your dad died – sometimes it helps to talk about it and if so, who would you like to be there for you?” is usually much appreciated by them. If possible offer them choices about how things should be handled and what support would be helpful. Let staff and classmates know how they want to be received and supported.
- 6.13. Fear of sudden emotional outbursts – anger, distress, panic...
You can help by - normalising grief reactions and giving them choices about what strategies will help them to cope in the classroom e.g. able to leave lessons without fuss – “exit card” system, where they can go, who they can talk to.
- 6.14. Fear when they realise they may not remember what the deceased person looks like
A laminated photo of the deceased person may give enormous comfort when the visual image begins to disappear. A special teddy or other memento will often give great comfort in times of distress and upset. They may also want to show this when talking about the person who died. It should be stressed that whatever helps the child within reason should be encouraged.
- 6.15. Fear of being behind with work and unable to catch up
You can help by - clarifying with other staff what is essential to accomplish and what can be left, and offering appropriate help to achieve what needs to be done.
- 6.16. Inability to concentrate and feel motivated or sit still
You can help by - Reassuring them that this lack of motivation and concentration is normal and will pass. Offer shorter more manageable tasks, write down the task, give encouragement for achievements, and minimising difficulties can often help.
- 6.17. Family grief impacting on normal family functioning
Disrupted routines, sporadic meals, chaotic bedtimes are possible reasons why they may be inadequately prepared for school, does not have the necessary equipment, and may be tired or hungry.

You can help by - Talking with them to ascertain where areas of difficulty lie and try and work out strategies with them and their family to help keep things on an even keel in school. Identify their strengths and help them build on them.

- 6.18. Unable to meet homework/project deadlines because of altered responsibilities within the family and home

You can help by - helping them work out and meet priorities. Be flexible where possible and offer additional support where needed.

- 6.19. Forthcoming examinations

You can help by - Explaining the process of notifying examination boards and the possible outcomes.

7. Guidelines for providing on-going support for a bereaved student

- 7.1. If the child/young person thinks it would be helpful and friends agree, establish a peer support network – ensuring that those helping are given appropriate support themselves or seek help outside, for example, by making a referral to Simon Says.
- 7.2. Make a note of significant dates which might affect the pupil, e.g. date of death, birthdays, Christmas, anniversaries. Make sure other members of staff are aware of these and the possible impact these may have. Don't be afraid to acknowledge these potentially difficult times with them e.g. "I know Christmas is coming up and it might feel a very different and difficult time for you all this year without your Dad – so don't forget, if it helps to talk you can always come and see me".
- 7.3. Consider possible reactions to class/assembly topics. Discuss how these difficulties might best be managed with them e.g. if making Mother's day cards do ask them if they wish to be included in the activity too, very often the answer is 'yes' as they still have a parent, they just can no longer see them, but still want to remember them.
- 7.4. Look out for signs of isolation, bullying or difficulties in the playground – bereaved children/young people are often seen as vulnerable and may become a target.
- 7.5. Consider using books/activities to help explore feelings and ideas about death as part of the normal school curriculum (call Simon Says for further advice)
- 7.6. Be alert to changes in behaviour – these may be an indication that they are more affected by their bereavement than they are able or willing to say. Reactions may present themselves months or years after the event, and it may be difficult for staff and others to relate behaviour(s) to the bereavement.
- 7.7. Follow up absences – absence could indicate bereavement – associated problems at home or school.
- 7.8. At transition time make sure the new class teacher and/or school are aware of the bereavement and support in situ.
- 7.9. At the end of the day, be yourself, listen and care.

8. Guidelines for supporting a student with special educational needs

- 8.1. All children benefit from being given simple, honest “bite size” pieces of information about difficult issues - often repeated many times over.
- 8.2. For further support visit www.autism.org.uk/about/family-life/bereavement.aspx or contact Simon Says.
- 8.3. When talking about death and bereavement with a child with learning difficulties it might be helpful to consider: -
 - WHO should be key worker working with the child and family - inform parents who this person will be and keep in contact, this should be someone they ALREADY have a good relationship with.
 - WHERE is the student most receptive to new ideas? – quiet room, outside. Use this space for talking with them.
 - WHAT should be talked about? (as agreed with parents). Ensure that you use the same language and ideas as the family to avoid confusion.
 - HOW is new information normally given? - signs, verbally, pictures. Use their normal communication methods to talk about illness and death.
 - HOW is new information normally backed up? – you will probably need to repeat information a number of times over a long period. Do you need to make a social story? (www.speakingspace.co.uk will assist with this)
 - PROCEED at a level, speed and language appropriate to them.
 - BUILD on information given – small bites of the whole, given gradually will be easier to absorb.
 - REPEAT information as often as needed.
 - WATCH for reactions to show the child understands – modify and repeat as needed.
 - FOLLOW the student’s lead – if indicating a need to talk or have feelings acknowledged, encourage as appropriate.
 - WATCH for changes in behaviour to indicate the child is struggling more than they can say and offer support as needed.
 - MAINTAIN normal daily routine as much as possible.
 - LIAISE with other agencies involved with the student to ensure accuracy and continuity of information.

Appendix A: Guidelines on how to inform children

Remember it is ok to show your emotions in moderation. It is important we model to children and young people healthy responses to sad news and a natural response to hearing about a death is to shed a tear.

- Be honest and factual.
- Use clear language – use the person’s name, do not use euphemisms like ‘passed away’ or ‘lost’ use the words dead, died and death to avoid confusion.
- Allow the children/young people to ask questions and answer them honestly and factually in terms they will understand.
- Allow the children/young people to ask questions and answer them honestly and factually in terms that they will understand.
- Allow the children/young people to verbalise their feelings.
- Allow the children/young people to discuss the situation and share their experiences of death (even if that is the death of a pet).
- Ensure the children/young people understand that the death is nothing to do with anything they have said or done. It is in no way their fault.
- Reassure them that not all people who are ill or have had an accident will die and that many people get better.
- Acknowledge some days will be harder than others
- Do not expect to go straight into maths, allow for a time of restoration preferably with a physical outlet.
- Put an appropriate time limit on the discussion. It is preferable to resume normal school activities as soon as possible thus ensuring minimal disruption within the school day which also offers a sense of security and familiarity.

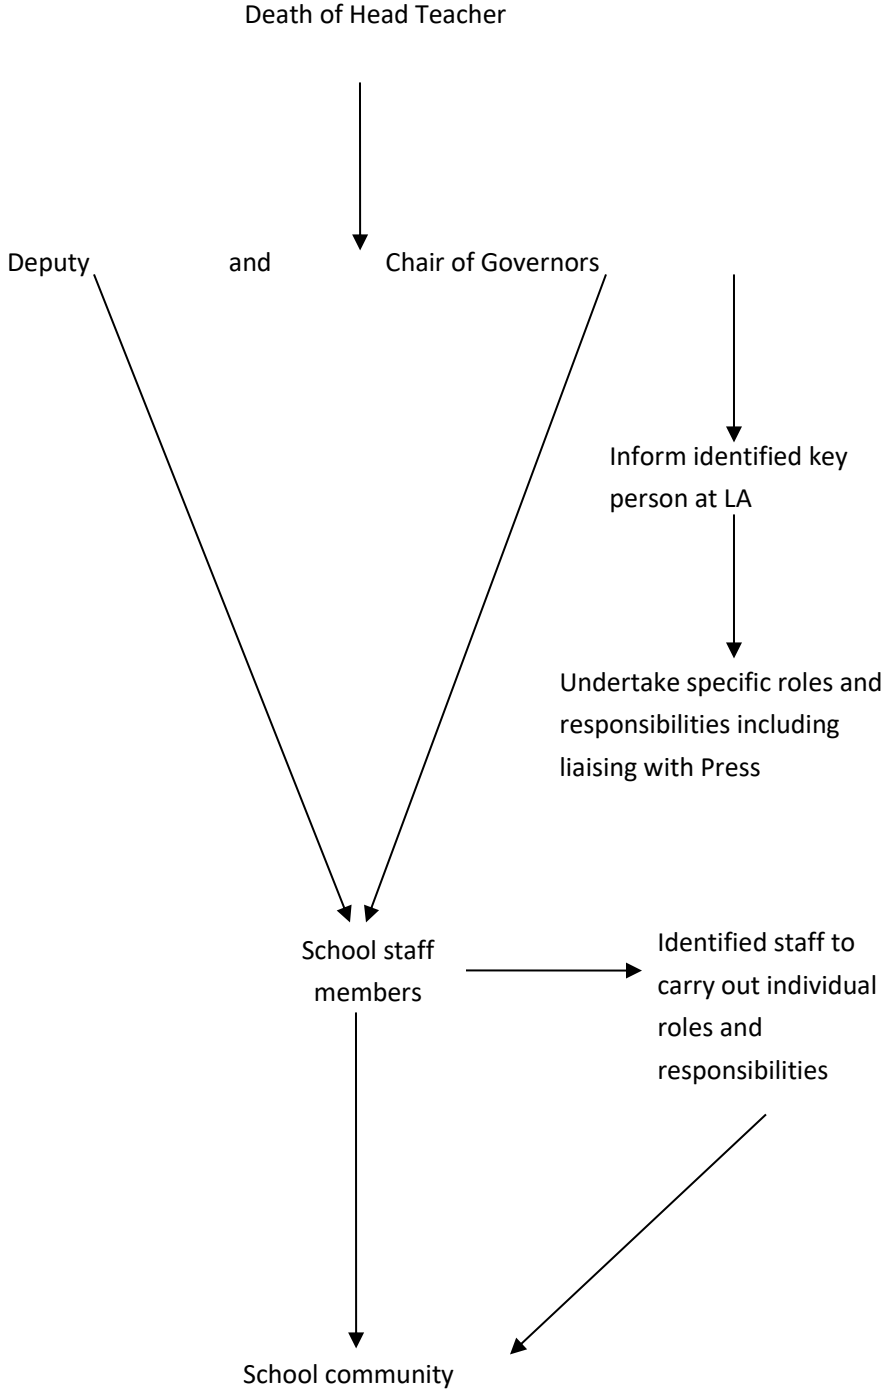

Suggested scripts to use when someone dies:

“I’ve got some really sad news to tell you today that might upset you. I know most of you will have heard of cancer, and know that sometimes people with cancer get better, but other times people die from it.

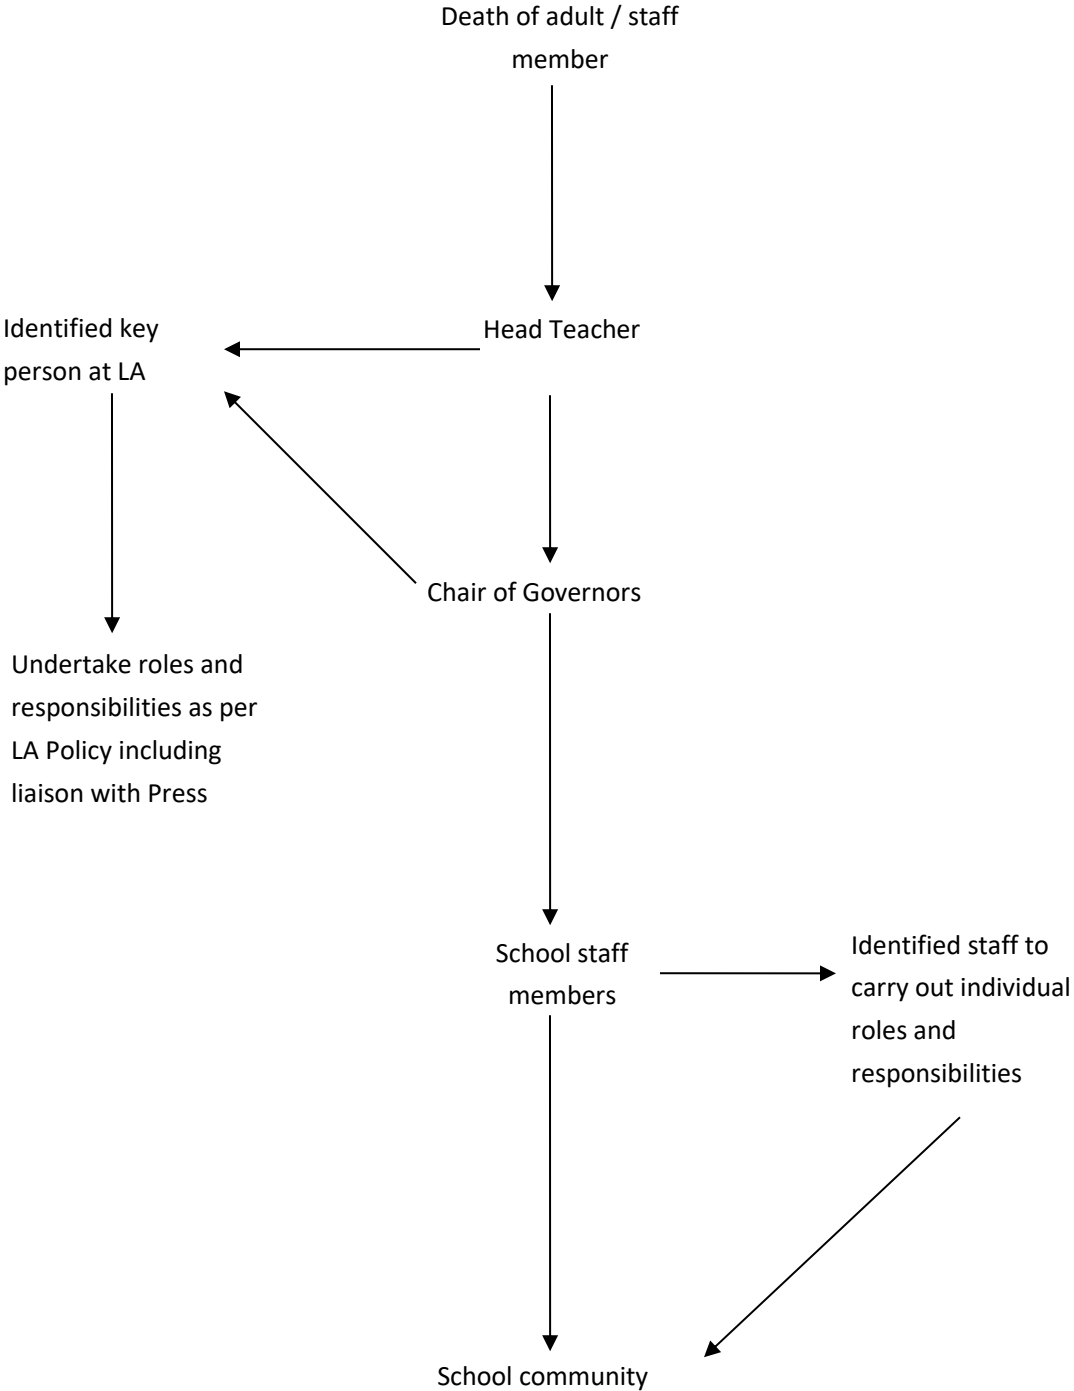

_____, the Geography teacher and Year 11 tutor, has been ill with cancer for a long time. I have to tell you that _____ died yesterday in hospital”.

“Sometimes people have accidents at work, at home, at school or on the road. People may be hurt or injured in the accident and they may have to go to hospital for treatment. Sadly, there are some accidents that cause people to die. I have some really sad news to tell you that might upset you. Yesterday _____, who is in Year 4, was in an accident and he was so badly injured that he died”.

Appendix F: Coronavirus

Explaining someone has died through COVID-19

There are some complicating factors about deaths from COVID-19 that may affect children

- Unpredictability: It's not only very old, very frail people who are dying. The person they know may have been a little frail before they contracted the virus or they may have appeared perfectly well.
- Suddenness: People may sicken and die quite rapidly; children will have little time to adjust to a rapidly changing future.
- Distance: Children won't be able to spend time with their dying relative, won't be able to touch or hug them or even be in the same room.
- Fear: People may react to the news that this person had died with instinctive fear rather than instinctive comfort.
- Separation: Children and young people will be physically distant from those who might support them – friends, teachers, wider family.
- Support structures: The current disruption of normal routine may mean children and young people have fewer places in which to switch off and focus on something else: for example, school, sports club, etc.
- Anger: Children and young people may feel angry about things they perceive to have contributed to this death: people being slow to self-isolate, lack of ventilators etc.
- Anxiety: While children and young people will worry about other family members dying after any death, in the present situation, such anxiety is sharper and less easy to soothe.
- Lack of 'specialness': More and more people will be or will know someone affected by a death due to coronavirus. The death of a child's important person won't receive as much attention as before this crisis.
- Constantly reminded: It will be hard for children to avoid hearing other stories of people affected by coronavirus.
- Absence of rituals: With heavy restrictions on funerals, children and young people will have less chance to 'say goodbye' in a formal sense

Some of these factors can make it more complicated to talk about. For example, it will be harder to explain why their special person died, (when perhaps someone else with similar symptoms didn't) as there is much still unknown about how the virus works. It may also feel harder to assure children that other people they know won't die yet.

Telling a child that someone important has coronavirus

Hopefully there will be time, even if only a short time, to prepare a child for the news that someone important has coronavirus. Here are some guiding words:

“I have something important to tell you. [Name] has become ill, and s/he has the illness called ‘coronavirus’. S/he is feeling ill, has a bad cough and feels hot. The illness means that s/he needs to stay in hospital. We won’t be able to visit them for at least a week. Perhaps you’d like to draw a picture/make a card/send a message to let her/him know you’re thinking about them. The doctors and nurses are all working really hard to get [name] better and we’re all hoping that s/he will be well again soon.”

Telling a child or young person that someone they know has died through coronavirus

“I have something very sad and difficult to tell you. [Name] died. You remember I told you that s/he had this illness called ‘coronavirus’ and that everyone was doing all they could to make them better? Sadly, despite all that [name] and the doctors and nurses did, the illness became too strong and their body could not get better. Their lungs stopped working and their heart stopped beating and they died.”

Talking to children about the death through coronavirus of other people/people they don’t know

Children and young people will also be aware of people outside their family and circle of friends who have the virus and there will be people they have heard of who might die. This is likely to make children wonder about the safety of those close to them. Acknowledging their anxiety is important, alongside realistic reassurance.

“It seems so shocking, doesn’t it, that [name of public figure] has died from the coronavirus? I know we didn’t know them, but it still feels very sad. I wanted to say that, here in this family, we are doing all the right things to avoid catching the virus. I know it can get dull sometimes but my job is to keep you safe and we’ll do all we can to keep us all well.”

Dear Parents

Your child's class teacher had the sad task of informing the children of the tragic death of <Name>, who has been a <teacher, LSA, Lunch time supervisor...> at this school for <number> years.

Our thoughts are with <Name's> family at this time and in an effort to try and respond to his/her death in a positive, all children have been informed.

The children were told that <Name> died from an <asthma attack> on <Date>. A number of pupils have been identified as being asthmatic and <Name>, the School Nurse has today reassured them that it is unusual for a person to die from asthma.

When someone dies, their family and friends have lots of feelings - sadness, anger, and confusion - which are all normal. The children have been told that their teachers are willing to try and answer their questions at school, but I have made available some information which may help you to answer your child's questions as they arise. You can obtain this from contacting Simon Says a Hampshire based child bereavement support charity. Their contact details are 02380 647550, email info@simonsays.org.uk or visit their website www.simonsays.org.uk.

The funeral will take place at <Named Church or Crematorium> on <Day and Date> at <Time>. Your child may wish to attend the funeral. If this is the case, you may collect your child from school and accompany them to the church. Please inform your child's tutor.

Yours sincerely
